A small startup business that does graphic design, web design and sells office supplies. The owner initially ran the company out of her home and recently decided to get a storefront. She needed some general help. A cashier was required and, some miscellaneous tasks were also done (ex., sealing products in plastic, making products, taking stock, etc.). A tiny bit of web development had occurred for a couple of clients. It was more of update information and figured out how to incorporate a widget or element. The websites that were worked on were WordPress websites using the Divi Builder extension.
